Os Wednesday night, July 18th, about 9 1-3 o'clock, our town was suddenly startled by the alarm of Fire! Fire! It was soon ascertained that the dwelling house of Col. Jas. Brown, on Depot street, west of town, was on fire. A scene of the utmost confusion ensued; but, thanks to place, New Orleans, are authorized to act as agents of the utmost confusion ensued; but, thanks to for the Intelligencer; to receive subscriptions and advertising, to make collections and receipt for the same. lost, and a large part of the furniture was saved. The house was burned to the ground; but the frame double office in the yard, and a brick kitchen in the rear of the dwelling, were saved, The loss is estimated at $7000. The fire was thought to have originated in a kitchen, connected with the dwelling, through some carelessness on the part of the servants.

On Thursday night, another alarm was sounded, about 9 o'clock. An effort had been made to fire the new steam-mill, on University street, south-west side of the square. The fire was very luckily discovered before it did any serious damage. A piece of an old check shirt had been set on fire, then rolled up and thrown upon the roof. Our citizens began now to be thoroughly aroused, and aware of the danger which was threatening thein.

On Saturday morning, about 4 o'clock, the house of Mr. NATHAN WORLEY, in the south part of town, was discovered to be on fire. The alarm was raised, and our citizens hurried to the spot; but unfortunately, all their efforts were of no heap of ruins. Mr. Wonney's loss was about recently bought this home for his family.

On Saturday night, we understand that an effort was made to set fire to the fine dwelling house of Mr. Neuron, just agross the street from stanza, the name Clothe was misprinted Clotha, Mr. Worley's. The attempt, we are glad to say, was frustrated

On Sunday night, some daring rascal made an attempt to fire the dwelling house of Mr. Rongar the Excursion, to Chicago and St. Anthony's Coox, on University street, by throwing a piece Falls, leaving this place on Tuesday evening of an old shirt, whick was aftre, upon the top of and closest to him in social and friendly renext, on the 3 1-2 o'clock train. two of the most experienced and popular Whig chiefs in the Union. These were the contests of the representation in congress of the Lexington Districts in which Mr. Clay had all his life resided, and where the Whig party had an overwhelming majority. Maj Breckinridge was then about the age of Bonaparte when he made the campaign of Italy. His opponents were veterans of political strategy and eminently endowed with the general qualities, as men and speakers, which command so great an influence over Kentuckians. Yet they were both utterly routed by their gallant adversary, who met them at every-point, fought them with every legitimate weapon, and not only defeated the Whig party, as it never before had been besten, but avail, and soon the house and its contents were a managed thereby to secure their profound respect and admiration.
